Boom might be a bust?

In his prescription for an architect's success, R. Gregory Turner suggests that because "there is no substitute for robust building activity," architects should not support "zoning, environmental regulation, and the Americans with Disabilities Act." ["Are There Too Many Architects?," ARCHITECTURAL RECORD, October 1995, pages 42-45]. This attitude is short-sighted and counter to the best interests of the profession.

Mr. Turner mourns the passing of the building boom of years past. That same gluttonous boom is responsible for the fouling of every town, city, and landscape that I've seen. No amount of profit justifies such pillage.

I support these regulations, but not for their "fee potential." As an architect, I strive to improve the environment for my clients and the public. I cannot think highly of an architect who values his or her profit above this concern. The aforementioned regulations are an architect's ally in convincing the public that the quality of our environment is important, that architects are among those qualified to shape that environment, and that such a service is worth paying for.

If all architects share Mr. Turner's priorities, then there are too many of us. If architects can show that our work has an importance that extends beyond our profit or the volume of our construction put in place, then the demand for our professional services will only increase.

Clients can be allies

In response to Elizabeth Padjen's review of "The Fountainhead-ache" [ARCHITECTURAL RECORD, September 1995, page 25], our industry must respond by abandoning the idea of the client as nemesis.

Our organization, the Strategic Team of Allied Resources, is an alliance of eleven architecture, engineering and consulting firms with offices across the United States. Earlier this year, we conducted a cross-sectional survey of our clients, who range from major entertainment organizations to government agencies to local retail developers. We found a keen desire on the part of nearly every client to participate in a relationship with architects and engineers rather than a struggle.

Some clients did mention the difficulty of the client/professional relationships they've had in the past, but all seemed willing to meet architects and engineers at least half way in an attempt to improve the next relationship. STAR members are working together to better our practices and our client relationships. It is our policy to invite clients to attend our meetings and roundtables to help us understand their position, their concerns, their expectations for the future, their expectations of us.

We sincerely wish that others in our industry will consider the client as a powerful ally, and begin working to change the antagonism to cooperation.

The mostly African-American architects attending the 25th annual convention of the National Association of Minority Architects (NOMA) in Los Angeles were not, if the truth be told, happy campers. The Hollywood-style entertainment could not disguise an undercurrent of serious apprehension as the nation's toughening stand on affirmative action begins to translate itself into laws, executive orders, and decisions in the courts. What, the architects began to ask themselves, will happen if minority set-aside programs and preferential college admission policies are curtailed or abolished?

Many minority architects, engineers, and other design professionals have long depended on being included on majority teams bidding for public work, in order to boost the team's chance of winning. But once the job was won, they were relegated to a minor role, a demeaning experience that allowed them to meet payrolls but did little to bolster their stature or their independence. If this support too is withdrawn, what next? True, there are several large, established black-owned firms in such cities as Chicago; Columbus, Ohio; Atlanta; Los Angeles; and Wichita, Kansas. Still, most minority firms—as is true for the profession as a whole—are small, with billings well under the $1-million mark, but are especially vulnerable to the new environment.

Deft probing has uncovered several strategies. One, stated in a letter to RECORD [October 1995, page 4] from New York City architect Everardo Jefferson, tells minority architects not to spurn small-scale projects—interior remodeling, entrances—as “not design work,” but rather to view them as an opportunity to do modest work well and with passion, and build up a track record that will command large commissions.

That's all right so far as it goes, but this somewhat Pollyannaish tack is going to have to be backed by some real clout in the political arena. That preferential treatment in the awarding of work is under attack and will decline is without question. But there's another side to the issue. It deals with becoming qualified, through training, so that minority professionals can compete with the majority on a level field. This means strengthening educational and mentor programs, starting not at the college level, but in the high schools and even earlier; singling out promising youngsters; and motivating them to excel in a profession that has not been kind to them.

The nation's demographics paint a sad picture—a giddy ratio of African-American children fighting poverty, abuse, and poor schooling. It's essential to expand funding at public school and college levels so that a Frank Lloyd Wright or a John Roebling is not lost to the country for lack of learning opportunity.

But that's not the same as saying that underqualified practitioners should be selected over those more qualified, or even that underachieving students in the professional schools should be graduated so as not to damage their self-respect. This precisely is what has spawned the current backlash against affirmative action.

Affirmative action hasn't been limited to racial minorities but takes in women and disabled veterans (the new acronym is MWDV). But it's the minority architects who will be most hit. NOMA, led by its vigorous, outspoken new president Cheryl McAfee, is working up a tough policy position that will eschew the extreme stand of affirmative action at any cost, and deliver, we hope, a plan to ensure every aspiring minority architect equal opportunity to become qualified. Stephen A. Kliment

Correspondent's File: Paris

The New Paris Library Reads Like an Open Book

Literature is the cornerstone of French culture and there was no better way for France's ex-president, François Mitterrand, to end a 14-year building campaign than with a new national library. Called the très grande bibliothèque, a word play on the TGV (train à grande vitesse), the high-speed French-designed train of which the country is so proud. Grande Bibliothèque is also synonymous with the memorable 1989 architectural competition, which produced entries of incredible quality. Runners-up included James Stirling and Rem Koolhaas, and each of their projects created as much, if not more, excitement as the winner.

Inaugurated last May, but not yet operational, the grande bibliothèque is officially called the Bibliothèque Nationale de France (BNF), which also includes Henri Labrousse's 1858 structure located in the heart of Paris. The new building will be the main branch, the official depository for every book, magazine, video, or compact disc ever published in France. This vast central storehouse will be electronically connected to libraries and home computers around the world. Public entry to the building will be limited and it will not lend books. It's purely a symbol—of the modernization of France, culture and knowledge, and, perhaps most importantly, a powerful, aging, now-ex President.

Being hand-picked by the President, however, doesn't guarantee success. The road from winning concept to reality has added more than a few grey hairs to the head of 42-year-old architect Dominique Perrault. Almost as soon as his winning entry was unveiled to the public, heated criticism began. Unlike the debate surrounding I.M. Pei's design of the glass entry pyramid at the Louvre, which focused on the relationship between the new design and the existing Cour Napoléon, criticism of the library took the form of a personal attack on Perrault, his talent, and a perceived irresponsibility in his dealing with a complicated program. It was a heavy burden for a young, ambitious, and, I believe, talented architect. As the project progressed, Perrault modified his scheme. After such a bold start, changes appeared as hesitations in a design that strives for perfect balance.

Four towers mark the corners of a rectangular esplanade in the middle of which is sunk a contemplative garden—it's calculatingly simple. The almost cliché symbolism of the towers as open books, obscures the architect's larger-scale reference to minimalist art and architecture. Perrault's heroes are Mies van der Rohe and Louis Kahn and artists Robert Morris and Donald Judd. The immediate clue is in the repetition of elements and the sobriety of the design. In Perrault's competition text he wrote that one of the greatest gifts to Paris would be "emptiness." His project is, in fact, an anti-monument defined by numbers and services: 10-million books, 600,000 hours of tape, 1.2-million pictures in an image bank, all stored among four 264-foot-high towers and 430,000 sq ft of reading rooms in a $1.6-billion building.

The library is full of paradoxes. First, the esplanade, a supposed public garden, is raised above the Seine, and surrounded by stairs. Anchored by the four towers and overlooking an off-limits garden, it isn't a likely spot for a game of soccer or a spin with a baby carriage. The second, more obvious paradox is that the books are in the towers and the users are below ground. The written word rises above people, a gesture many French applaud. What they find less acceptable is the idea of precious books being baked in glass boxes. Perrault insists that his idea of transparency was greatly misunderstood. "I never said that the building would be completely transparent," he stresses. What he hoped, he says, was that there would be a sense of the towers filling up over time. Actually, the towers will be full on opening day, with offices now taking up their lower seven floors. For protection, the glass facades of the book-storage floors are lined with permanently closed, vertical wood shutters. The opacity undermines Perrault's original premise. Rather than witness the library's gradual accumulation of books, views in are obscured. The architect fought to maintain his design, which, at least from the outside, gradually lost its reason for being.

Inside the library, Perrault regains control. The driving internal force is circulation: people, books, electronic information. The reading room floors are arranged as rings around the garden. The innermost corridor is surrounded by reading rooms, which are surrounded by book stacks and support spaces. Read vertically, the first underground level holds public spaces, while secured, monumental escalators at the corners take some 2,000 researchers down to private study rooms. It's all systematic and aided by what will be, on its opening in 1996, one of the most sophisticated library computer networks in the world. Here, the library fulfills its mission to bring France into the next century, not by creating a work of art, but a work of high technology.

With so much of the building focusing inward, it's not surprising that the design is most successful in its interior detailing. Stainless steel, wood, and an array of metal fabrics alleviate the plan's austerity. Long, high spaces are softened by red carpeting. There is no view of the city from the reading rooms or even of the river. Conversely, much of Paris sees the library's towers: closed, and inward-looking and not distinguishable from other high rises on the skyline.

Situated on the less-affluent eastern edge of Paris, in a neighborhood cut off from the Seine by train tracks, barges, and light industry, the BNF is the focal point of the Seine Rive Gauche development. On over 321 acres, with 74 acres gained by building on top of the tracks, will be built 9.2 million sq ft of office space, 5.38 million sq ft of residential, and 3.76 million sq ft of commercial, all to create a gateway to the river front. From 1987 until the present, dozens of local and international architects submitted proposals for the area, until a single, fairly classic government master plan was selected. Its two key features—the creation of the broad Avenue de France along the southern limit of the site, and the development of the river front with walkways and park area to the north. Underway is the housing, arranged in traditional Parisian ilot (or small island) blocks, which give priority to the unified street facade, hiding ample interior courtyards. Grouped around the library and along the Seine, each housing block, designed in city competition, follows the master plan with little relation to the library. As Perrault points out, urban zone and library have two different clients—city and state—who didn't work together.

Today the Presidential building campaign in Paris, the grands projets, is over. In its wake, a program of restoration is underway. Since Mitterand took office in 1981, Paris has sampled a range of architectural styles, quickly passing to the next. None of the resulting buildings is particularly sensitive to, or typical of, old Paris, but that was not the intention. Yet, the city has managed to absorb each with barely a hiccup. Nonetheless, it's only Pei's pyramid that truly engages the urban scale and, to a certain extent, the Grande Arche de la Défense, which opens to the city's perimeter. Other projects, like Christian de Portzamparc's Cité de la Musique, became showcases for the state's generous commitment to the arts.

Mitterand's tenure as a master builder can best be judged as a catalyst, a powerful hand opening the door for some dozen projects strategically placed around the city. Overall, it's been a successful marketing strategy, giving the city a new allure. "In all towns, I feel like an emperor or an architect. I divide. I decide. I arbitrate," Mitterand has written. Few U.S. leaders would proclaim their power so boldly, if in fact they possessed it. American architecture depends on the patronage of private industry, institutions, and individuals; the grands projets on a powerful central government. Both systems have created great architecture. Mitterand worried that Paris would become a museum of the past. He needed the new. In the U.S., the danger is in becoming a victim of the present. The lesson of the grands projets is: take a chance, but don't allow architecture to become so self-serving that it ignores the realities of the city around it. Claire Downey

The palette of interior materials—stainless steel, wood, and metal fabrics—adds a layer of richness to vast spaces.

Sweet's-Autodesk Pact

As we go to press, Sweet's Group and Autodesk, Inc. announced they will develop a new electronic product to contain manufacturers' building products and equipment data in pre-formatted, dimensioned CAD files architects will be able to easily integrate into existing design and construction documents. Rather than being a static reference to be looked up and read, the new product will include intelligent representation of objects, such as windows from specific manufacturers. This information can then be inserted into the contract documents and carried through to the end of the project, increasing the architect's productivity and reducing costs as well as chances for error.

The product is to form part of Autodesk's new Design and Construction Library, delivering, according to Sweet's Group senior vice president Bob Russell, "well-organized, standardized, and easily accessible information—all from a single source."

Autodesk announced it had signed publishing agreements also with R. S. Means Co., Manufacturers' Survey Associates, and John Wiley & Sons.

In next month's ARCHITECTURAL RECORD, look for an assessment of this broadbased linkage between content providers and distribution channels by RECORD computer columnist Steve Ross.—S. A. K.

Electronic product-information today

The days of hard copy "cut and paste" specifications and details are long gone, and with the advent of CD-ROM and the Internet, building-product manufacturers have the ability to provide large quantities of up-to-date and fast-changing information efficiently and effectively. Architects can have a profound effect on this trend by requesting data in these formats, encouraging up-to-the-minute availability via on-line services, requiring larger and more complex information delivered on CD-ROM, and giving feedback to the manufacturers who are trying to provide this information.

Updating a CAD product-specification survey first published in December, 1990, RECORD asked Tim Kirby of Kirby & Associates, Atlanta (404/876-8470) and SgL Consultants to poll manufacturers about data sources currently available in an electronic format. Some of the newest programs are listed here; unless otherwise noted, there is no charge for the software. Additions and corrections should be sent to SgL Consultants, accessible via Compuserve: 72230,1303 or the Internet at 72230.1303@compuserve.com.

Hit List: 1995's Most-Requested New Products and Product Literature

Where do new products come from? Every month, RECORD receives between 80 and 100 announcements of building-product introductions, line extensions, and new technical literature. In addition, we request information about specific product categories to coordinate with editorial features such as our Building Types Studies, and attend trade shows like the National Association of Roofing Contractors and CSI with notepad in hand to report on new materials.

After surviving a first cut on the basis of general architectural interest, these new products are reviewed for perceived usefulness compared to similar systems or materials. Among items that eventually are published on New Product pages, those with the widest appeal tend to draw more postcard inquiries than project-specific materials: everyone uses a kitchen, while fewer need data on roof-edge treatments at any given time. On these pages we highlight those new products (for the most popular catalogs and brochures, turn the page) that drew the highest level of interest from our architect and designer readers during 1995, as measured by the number of cards asking for additional information.—J.F.B.

1. By a wire. Blome's beautifully made curtain wire drew the most interest. The German hardware has decorative endbracket terminals that keep stainless-steel wire cable under constant tension to suspend draperies, screen a bed or bookcase with sheer fabric, or divide a space. Blome Corporation, Secaucus, N.J. Circle 200

2. Hide-away icebox. Number 2 was Sub-Zero's Integrated 700 Series system of cabinets and drawers that conceals refrigeration units. Units are self-contained; two refrigerated drawers can work as part of a counter island, and a slim freezer fits into a taller cupboard. Sub-Zero Freezer Co., Madison, Wis. Circle 201

3. Wire placement. Wiremold introduced the Access 5000 voice/data/power raceway, available in colored PVC or wood veneer. Shown at an ADA-compliant chair-rail height, the raceway resembles a standard baseboard when placed near the floor and finished with wood quarter-round. Wiring can be added without cutting into walls. The Wiremold Co., West Hartford, Conn. Circle 202

Hundreds of new products and updated catalogs are selected by RECORD editors for publication each year. Here's a recap of those our readers found most interesting during 1995.

4. Custom-design doors. The Advent door line lets the architect specify any of 15 routed patterns for the center panel of stile-and-rail interior or exterior doors, or design a unique motif. Doors come in heights up to 8 ft, primed and ready to paint. Simpson Door Co., McCleary Wash. Circle 203

5. Cloth of steel. A line of woven-wire materials from France piqued readers' interest. Sprint Metal's wire and cable mesh can be used as an architectural element such as a stair enclosure or a wall covering. FrancoSteel Corp., New York City. Circle 204

6. Colorful solid surfaces. Gibraltar, a blend of polyester and acrylic resins with NSF and FDA approvals for food contact, came out in 10 new colors, including tones like Midori

Tempest, a dark green. Wilsonart, Temple, Tex. Circle 205

7. Architectural element. Readers were interested in the competition-winning leaded-glass installation created under National Percent for the Arts guidelines for the Federal Courthouse in Baton Rouge, La. Artist Arthur Stern creates large-scale site-specific works in glass for churches, colleges, and other building types. Arthur Stern Studios, Benicia, Calif. Circle 206

8. Curvature. Another attention-getter was architect Ron Yeo's use of an aluminum-frame/reinforced fiberglass barrel vault as a light-transmitting roof in a California studio/residence. The system combines thermal insulation with light-transmission rates of from 3 to 74 percent, and can be specified to meet stringent fire codes. Kalwall Corp., Manchester, N.H. Circle 207

9. Kitchen ventilation. Another residential component among our top 10, a line of Danish-made vent hoods was offered in more economical models for between- and under-cabinet installation. Hoods made of seamlessly welded stainless steel or brass can be ordered in standard or restaurant-style depths with utensil-rail and lighting options. Abbaka, San Francisco. Circle 208

10. Creative. Designer Patrick Naggar demonstrated the structural, functional, and decorative potential of Surell solid-surfacing material in his Aura bathroom. Formica Corp., Cincinnati. Circle 209

Product Literature Review

New product literature—catalogs, announcements of sample programs and architectural binders, specification sheets, flyers, and electronic CAD details—usually draw a larger response per item than do product articles. Our criteria for selecting literature for editorial coverage include our perception of its interest and utility to the architectural specifier, and the success with which the technical text and illustrations describe the product's appearance and performance.

RECORD selected 299 separate catalogs and other types of product-information sources to publish on our Product Literature pages in 1995—here are the “top 10.”—J.F.B.

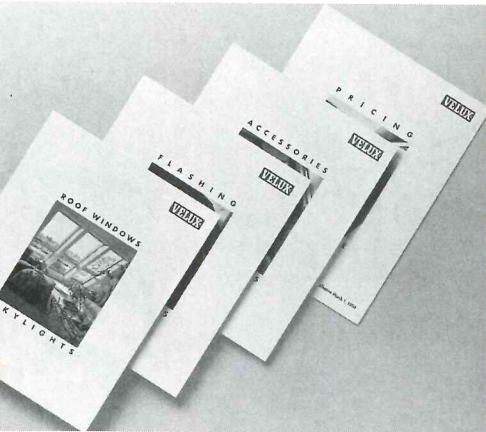

1. Wood-floor guidance. First on our Most-Requested List was the premier issue of Tips & Techniques, a series of technical brochures designed to help residential builders and architects work more effectively with hardwoods. Prepared by an industry association that promotes increased use of sustainably grown North American hardwoods in flooring, paneling, furniture, cabinetry, and decorative millwork, the first issue explained how to accommodate changes in wood's moisture content. The Hardwood Council, Oakmont, Pa. Circle 210

2. Wiring device guide. Leviton's Great Idea Book helps design professionals recommend useful new wiring-device applications in the home: how to have enough switches and outlets and how to make sure they are put in the safest and most convenient place. Leviton Manufacturing Co., Little Neck, N.Y. Circle 211

3. Doors in colors. Weyerhaeuser's new Designer Colors line offers 12 choices of water-base stain for each wood-veneer architectural door. An 18-page catalog shows each color on each wood type. Weyerhaeuser Door Division, Marshfield, Wis. Circle 212

4. Architectural millwork. “Details” decorative trim, made of polyurethane to resemble wood without the maintenance, drew substantial interest to its line of window and door mantels and crossheads, brackets, dentil block, and other decorative elements for interior and exterior use. Georgia-Pacific Corp., Atlanta. Circle 213

5. Door track and hangers. Johnson's compact brochure describes special hardware for sliding and folding doors, pocket doors, and shutters, including hinges that "widen" some doorways just enough for wheelchair passage. L. E. Johnson Products, Inc., Elkhart, Ind. Circle 214

6. Work-at-home. A Steelcase company, Turnstone makes space-saving desks, seating, casegoods, and computer-support furniture to fit the home-office budget. A 48-page catalog illustrates all current designs, and gives prices and ordering information. Turnstone, Wyoming, Mich. Circle 215

7. Accessible home. Prepared for the homeowner as well as the design professional, Planning for Access covers basic methods of achieving a barrier-free home, including ideas that can be applied to renovation projects as well as new construction. Plans and photos demonstrate how separate features such as low thresholds can be combined to create homes that meet the needs of wheelchair users. Eastern Paralyzed Veterans Assn., Jackson Heights, N.Y. Circle 216

8. Skylight how-to. Perennially popular, Velux's 36-page Complete Guide to Roof Windows and Skylights shows how to bring sunlight and fresh air into windowless interior spaces. Gives an overview of unit sizes and correct flashing and installation. Velux-America, Greenwood, S.C. Circle 217

9. Radiant heating. Catalogs demonstrate residential, commercial, and industrial applications of subfloor heating systems. The Infloor High Capacity system, number 9 on RECORD'S list, circulates a heated water/propylene-glycol fluid below almost any type of floor, indoors and out, including concrete, asphalt, and brick pavers. Maxxon Corp. (formerly Gyp-Crete Corp.), Hamel, Minn. Circle 218

10. Architectural aluminum options. Rounding out the Most-Requested List is Anodizing, The Finish of Choice. This 16-page guide explains current state of the art metal-treatment techniques and the colors they can achieve, and compares batch and continuous-coil methods. Aluminum Anodizers Council, Wauconda, Ill. Circle 219 ■

OUR LATEST IDEA IN STEEL IS FULL OF HOLES.

Introducing new Castelite Steel Beams—the latest from Chaparral Steel. Stronger, lighter, and better looking, Castelite beams provide the ultimate architectural alternative for large, open-spanned areas.

Made from 100% recycled material, Castelite Beams have a high strength/weight ratio, making them perfect for supporting light and moderate concentrated loads, minimizing the need for costly reinforcement. The holes also allow for easy electrical, sprinkler, and mechanical service.

Castelite Beams are made by cutting a hot-rolled beam with computer-controlled, plasma-arc torches. Then, the beam halves are separated, staggered, and welded together. The resulting Castelite Beam weighs the same but is deeper and much stronger than the original hot-rolled beam.

If you'd like to find out more about this new, cost-effective idea from Chaparral Steel, give us a call at (800) 775-4611. We'll be happy to show you how an idea that's full of holes can solidify and beautify your next construction project.

INTRODUCTION

How to Use This Directory Issue

ARCHITECTURAL RECORD's Directory has two sections, each supplying information on manufacturers of building components of primary interest to practicing architects and designers. The first section, on the following pages, covers the 16 standard building-product classifications; each page lists sources of the products included under CSI classification numbers. Select the firms that make the products you are interested in, then locate their listing in the alphabetical Index of Manufacturers on page 222. Each entry gives information to contact that source for catalogs and the design and technical information you need to specify.

Numbers and text in the black-bar headline identify the major product-classification divisions—from 1, General Data, through 16, Electrical—following Sweet's 16-Division Data Filing Format, a construction-industry standard. Product Divisions are separated by illustrated advertisements specially written to provide detailed product information appropriate to that specification category.

Red text block that starts each of the 16 major building-product divisions lists the different product types that appear in the Directory under that heading. These are placed in alphabetical order to let you find each one easily. The appropriate CSI sub-category number is given for each product type.

Company names in the Directory are listed alphabetically under each of the specification-subsection headings that correspond with products they make. To contact firms, see their entry in the alphabetical Index to Manufacturers, starting on page 222.

Footnotes at the bottom of each page supply additional information about specific firms.

Names in red have sponsored product-specific advertisements for the Directory, which can be found on the pages listed.

Firms in bold type supply product information in the 1996 editions of Sweet's Files.

Index of Manufacturers

Each listing includes the corporate name, divisional data, mailing and street addresses, and telephone and fax numbers for every company featured. Entries are based on data supplied by firms themselves, responding to a questionnaire distributed by ARCHITECTURAL RECORD and The Sweet's Group. To be included in future Directories, please call Joan Blatterman to receive the next survey mailing—fax 212/512-4256.

Manufacturer listings and product classifications are based on responses to questionnaires circulated by ARCHITECTURAL RECORD and Sweet's Group of McGraw-Hill, Inc. While we have tried to make them as accurate and complete as possible, we cannot assume responsibility for errors or omissions.

ICBO - Helping to Build a Better Industry

The International Conference of Building Officials (ICBO) is dedicated to public safety in the built environment worldwide through development and promotion of uniform codes and standards, enhancement of professionalism in code administration, and facilitation of acceptance of innovative building products and systems.

International Conference of Building Officials was founded in 1922 in response to the need for a code that all communities could accept and enforce. By 1927 the first Uniform Building Code™ (U.B.C.) was published. Now, more than 60 years later, ICBO is the nation's leading model code organization in terms of area served and code use. A non-profit service corporation, owned and controlled by its member cities, countries, states and federal agencies, ICBO has become international by the acceptance of the Uniform Building Code throughout the United States and in many locations abroad.

Summary of Products and Services

The most up-to-date regulations for all major aspects of building design and construction relating to fire and life safety and structural safety are included in the Uniform Building Code™ and related codes published by ICBO. Additional offerings provided by ICBO include . . . education seminars • professional certification programs • computer software • educational and technical publications • video training programs • an evaluation service providing technical information of proprietary materials and systems • membership benefits and services • more than 80 chapters • and a large, technically diversified professional staff.

ICBO PROFESSIONAL MEMBERSHIP FOR ARCHITECTS AND ENGINEERS

For years, building and fire officials have taken advantage of the valuable benefits and services that come from belonging to the International Conference of Building Officials (ICBO). Now you, as a design professional, have an opportunity to take advantage of many of these same benefits and services.

Education/Seminars

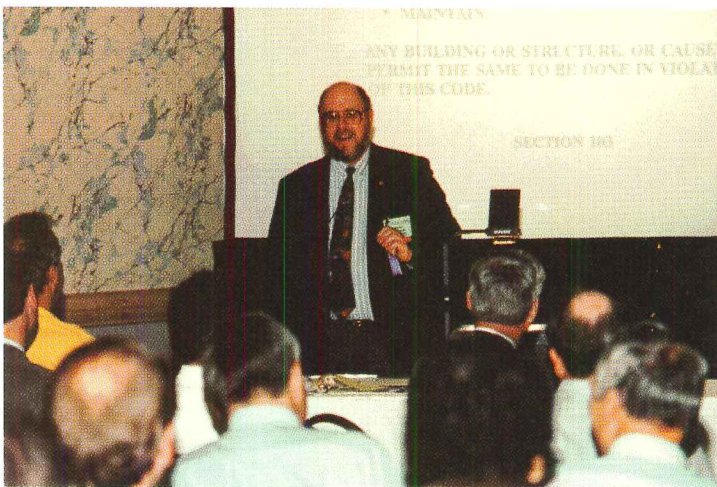

As the publisher of the 1994 Uniform Building Code™ (U.B.C.) and related codes and standards, the International Conference of Building Officials (ICBO) has developed a full range of seminars to enhance your knowledge of the code and to assist you with the application of its requirements. With over 40 courses available, ICBO seminars allow you to focus on the specific topics which interest you and meet the American Institute of Architects requirements for approved learning Units (LUs). Since these seminars are based on the requirements found in the U.B.C. and related documents, the learning units received will count not only toward your required annual total, but will also fall under the "health and safety" area of required training.

The International Conference of Building Officials is registered with the American Institute of Architects Continuing Education System and is committed to developing quality learning activities in accordance with the AIA/CES criteria. The Conference has received Quality Level 3 recognition from AIA/CES for the design/plan review seminars and other selected courses. With Quality Level 3 recognition, a student participating in an eligible seminar will receive 3 LUs for each classroom contact hour, thus receiving 18 LUs per day of instruction. Essentially, an architect could attain the required 36 LUs with just two days of training from ICBO.

Courses in ICBO's design/plan review series provide a comprehensive learning experience for individuals responsible for building design or plan review using the 1994 U.B.C. All ICBO seminars are designed to provide participants with valuable tools for effective use and better understanding of the code. Through classroom instruction, practical student exercises and student interaction, the seminars are valuable resources in the development of an overall understanding of the U.B.C. All participants receive an illustrated seminar workbook designed as an integral component of the education program. These workbooks are also useful as a practical tool for future reference.

While a course track containing all five design/plan review seminars is the most comprehensive method of learning, courses may be taken selectively to address individual needs. For a quick overview or refresher on the code, Seminar 380, Overview of the U.B.C., addresses all of the major nonstructural elements of the code in two days.

Additional course offerings of interest are Seminar 101, 1994 U.B.C. Nonstructural Update; Seminar 105, Accessibility and Usability; and Seminar 115, Architectural Applications of the U.B.C. To receive a detailed description of all the ICBO seminars, contact ICBO Seminar Services at (800) 423-6587, extension 3244 or 3266. If there is not a seminar in your area, ICBO will be happy to work with you to offer a program for you or your group.

Voluntary Certification for Architects

Certification programs are becoming increasingly popular as a means of indicating proficiency among professions. Initiated in 1973, ICBO's Voluntary Certification Program offers a wide variety of certifications as a means to encourage professionalism among inspection and plan check personnel. Certifications are issued following comprehensive tests on knowledge of codes, standards and practices necessary for professional competency.

While ICBO offers 22 categories of certification, the two most beneficial to architects and interns are certification as a Certified Plans Examiner and a Building Code Accessibility/Usability Specialist. The plans examiner certification is designed to show satisfactory knowledge of relevant codes, standards and practices necessary for competence in reviewing and checking plans and specifications for compliance with the nonstructural aspects of 1994 U.B.C. Volume 1. Certification as a Building Code Accessibility/ Usability Specialist is designed to show satisfactory knowledge of relevant accessibility codes and standards necessary for competence in the evaluation of both new construction and the retrofitting of existing/adaptable buildings and associated plans examination. This examination is based on the 1994 U.B.C. and CABO/ANSI A117.1-1992, Accessible and Usable Buildings and Facilities. It should be noted that all three model building codes have virtually the same scoping provisions and reference the CABO/ANSI A117.1-1992 standard.

For more information on ICBO's Voluntary Certification Program, contact ICBO headquarters at (800) 423-6587, extension 3208.

ICBO Evaluation Service, Inc.

An international leader in building product evaluation services, ICBO Evaluation Service, Inc. (ICBO ES), traces its origins back to 1931 when the International Conference of Building Officials (ICBO) recognized the need to provide the building industry with impartial technical reports on manufactured building products. Initially established as a research committee of ICBO, this entity developed and participated in test programs for new products and materials.

Since its beginning, ICBO ES functions have expanded considerably and it is currently a wholly owned subsidiary corporation of ICBO with a staff of professionally licensed civil, structural, fire, mechanical and quality control engineers. Today, ICBO ES performs evaluation of data on building products as well as evaluating testing laboratories and quality assurance agencies, while an advisory evaluation committee comprised of building officials conducts public hearings. The hearings are a necessary step to provide input in the development of requirements for products that are alternatives to those permitted by the Uniform Building Code (U.B.C.). All testing is performed by independent laboratories recognized under the ICBO ES Laboratory Accreditation Program.

The ICBO ES Evaluation Reports Program is intended to assist building code enforcement officials, but actually serves the entire building industry by evaluating building products and services in an impartial manner. Those products and services found to comply with the U.B.C. are recognized through technical reports. This service is essential because not many code enforcement agencies have the time and expertise to do this work. Product evaluation provides the manufacturer with a means of gaining recognition for compliance with the U.B.C., which is the basis for building law in much of the United States.

In support of various free trade agreements which are working toward the elimination of extraneous technical barriers, ICBO ES is active in efforts to establish recognition of products and services across international boundaries. ICBO ES is a charter member of the Asia Pacific Laboratory Accreditation Cooperation, in addition to a charter member of the newly formed international group of conformity assessment organizations on building products. The ICBO ES president serves as the United States chairman of the construction sector of the North American Trilateral Standardization Forum. ICBO ES has also developed bilateral working relationships with Japan, Canada, Brazil, Australia and New Zealand and the ICBO ES Laboratory Accreditation Program is recognized internationally through participation in the International Laboratory Accreditation Council and the Asia Pacific Laboratory Accreditation Cooperation.

For more information, contact ICBO ES at 5360 Workman Mill Road, Whittier, CA 90601-2299, (310) 699-0543, fax (310) 695-4694.

Distinctive, Durably Built Site Furnishings from Landscape Forms

Tasteful, Durably Built Site Landscape Forms, Inc. creates and manufactures distinctive furniture for actively used spaces.

Sleek and sturdy. Graceful and solid. Elegant and durable. These qualities describe the wide variety of site furnishings available from Landscape Forms, Inc. From benches to bicycle racks, Landscape Forms can add a touch of the artistic to exterior spaces.

Landscape Forms products blend into the scenery without becoming part of the background. The company's product groups and collections — including Plexus, Petoskey, Scarborough, Hyde Park, and Kenworthy — evoke friendships, celebrations, or solitude.

Each piece of furniture, whether of wood, powdercoated metal, or PolySite recycled plastic, is molded and shaped to be both functional and beautiful.

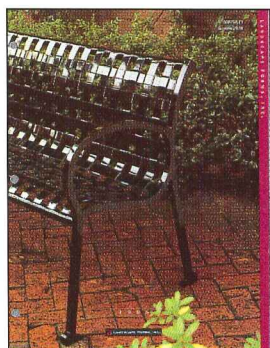

Features. Furnishings from Landscape Forms are long-lasting and versatile. The tubular steel frames of metal chairs and benches are finished with the company's own Pangard II powdercoat for supreme durability, indoors or out. Most metal furnishings are available in a variety of colors, adding sparkle to all kinds of areas. Many products can be ordered in several sizes, thus proving fitting in more ways than one. And Landscape Forms products are made in the USA.

Materials. The furniture is made from a variety of materials: steel, aluminum, maple, jarrah, oak, and redwood, cut to exacting specifications and assembled with precision. For metal parts, Landscape Forms' exclusive Pangard II polyester powdercoat provides a hard, yet flexible finish that resists rusting, chipping, peeling and fading, thus preserving metalwork for long life.

PolySite recycled plastic is molded from 100% high-density polyethylene (HDPE), derived from post-consumer milk containers. Resistant to the effects of weather and most graffiti, PolySite requires no finishing and will not rot, splinter, crack, or check.

For Landscape Forms furnishings, form follows function — and also transcends it.

The Landscape Forms product binder features distinctive site furnishings, including seating systems, benches, tables, chairs, picnic tables, aluminum umbrellas, litter receptacles, ash urns, bike racks, and planters.

Marble From Greece: A Tradition of Marble From Greece. A Tradition of Excellence.

The history of Greek marble goes back thousands of years. The Acropolis in Athens and the Venus of Milos are but two testimonies to its value and quality. This storied tradition is carried on today with Marble From Greece: a material of shining possibilities, varied colors and solid value.

As early as 5,000 B.C.E., sculptors and builders alike recognized the unique properties of this extraordinary stone. The artist found a material malleable enough to permit rich detail, and the architect discovered a stone of resilience and beauty.

However, Greek marble belongs equally to the present age. It remains among the most widely-used mediums for construction and architectural design, as well as one of the most beautiful and resilient materials in the world.

Quality. Marble from Greece is distinguished by its consistent quality. Greek marble companies conduct extensive pre-selection processes to ensure that only the best products with the most consistent color and veining are exported. This commitment to quality has led the Greek marble industry to become the world's third-largest producer, quarrying 2.6 million tons annually.

Value. Greece has increased marble production more than 80 percent in the last decade and now outperforms other recognized marble sources. Yet there has been no decline in the quality of Greek Marble. The benefits of Greece's superior quarrying and crafting skills, coupled with continuous modernization efforts, make Marble From Greece one of the top three choices of the American market.

Versatility. Marble From Greece can be arranged in compelling geometric patterns, lending any area a touch of elegance. The extensive palette of colors and the quality of the stone give architects and designers great versatility in creating designs. Examples of innovative usage of Greek marble can be seen in structures from the Vivere in Chicago and the Hotel Millenium-Broadway in New York to the award-winning Interbank Building in Queens, New York, designed by S.P. Papadantos Associates.

The Greek Marble Hotline:

Information on marble from Greece is only a phone call away. The Greek Marble Hotline gives you the opportunity to get answers to any questions you may have about marble from Greece.

Quality and Worldwide Recognition

Applications. Greek Marble can be used almost anywhere, from elegant hotels and private homes to public halls and office buildings.

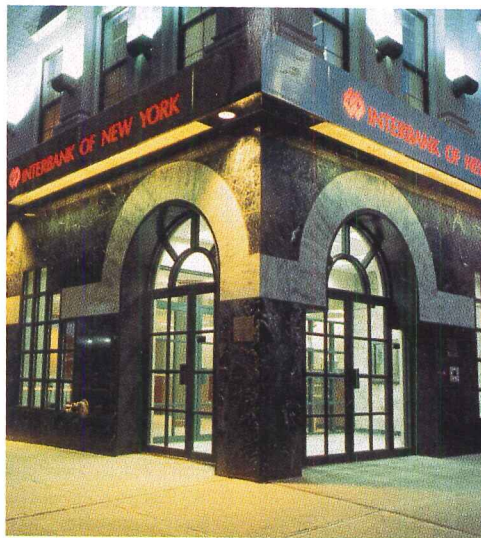

Traditionally, marble has erroneously been considered too porous for use in kitchens and baths. However, several Greek marbles have been found to be sufficiently hard to prevent easy staining.

Greek marble is employed on floors and in baths, as an architectural accent and on building exteriors. It is a universally useful material.

Marble Maintenance. Preserving the beauty of certain marbles requires careful, regular maintenance. New cleaning and polishing methods have been developed and refined to help preserve the marble in its original condition with a minimum of effort.

For floors with a honed finish, regular foot traffic allows your floor to gracefully develop a natural patina. Preserve floors with a clear, buffable surface sealer to reduce scuffing and staining. Include periodic stripping and reapplication of the sealer as necessary.

The options for maintaining your polished marble floor fall into three broad categories: 1) restore the polished marble finish periodically, as necessary; 2) maintain a commercial floor finish on the marble surface, using sealers and regular maintenance procedures; or 3) periodically clean the surface with a water-detergent mixture, applying no sealers or finishes. The highly-polished marble will eventually develop a low-luster finish, similar to the honed finish marble floor.

Marble From Greece National Design Competition

The Annual Marble from Greece National Design Competition focuses on outstanding usage of Greek marble. Architects and interior designers are invited to submit entries featuring marble from Greece in all aspects of design. Entries are due by December 31.

Castellated Steel Beams... No Longer Just a Specialty Item

Castelite cuts hot-rolled beams longitudinally, staggers the halves, and welds them together according to American Welding Society Standards. All welding is done near the center of the beam web where stresses are minimal. The resulting beam weighs the same—but is deeper and much stronger than—the original hot-rolled beam.

Applications. Castelite beams can be used in residential or commercial application where an economical structural support is needed. They are distinctive enough for exposure in such interiors as shopping centers and schools.

Benefits. Castelite's high strength-to-weight ratios eliminate the need for costly reinforcement to support light and moderate concentrated loads. Great Britain has used castellated beams in steel construction for some time.

The cutting process provides for flexible opening geometry for electrical, sprinkler and mechanical services.

Standard lengths are kept in stock to help reduce lead times and save money.

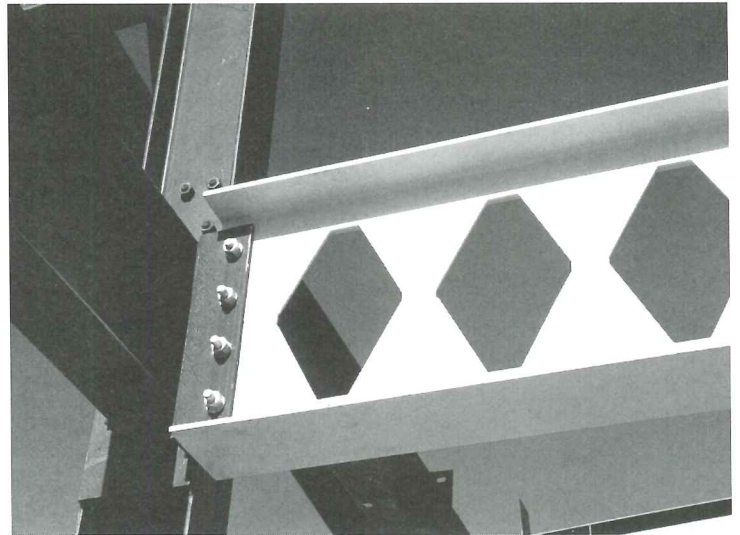

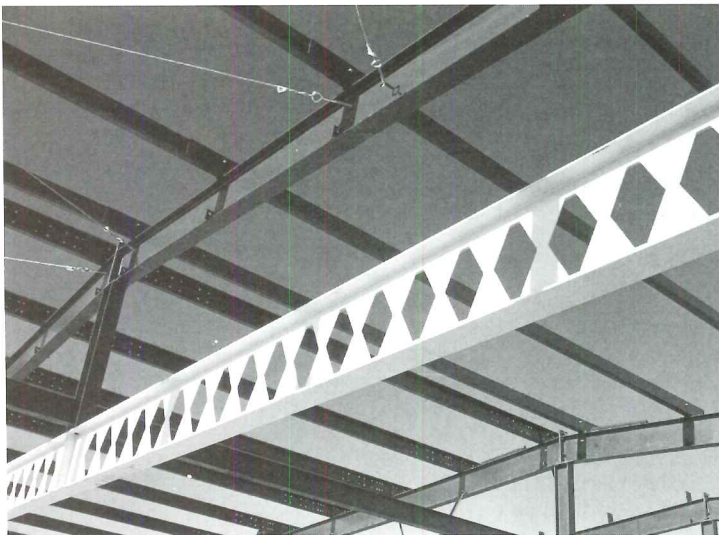

Features. Castelite makes composite and non-composite floor beams, roof purlins, wall girts, and cantilevered drop-in beams. The beams span up to 100 ft. in depths up to 48 in.

Custom software enables the designer to select the most efficient structural members and design special members for special loads, including concentrated loads, end moments, uplift, and safe erection.

Performance Capabilities. Castelite beams are designed in accordance with the latest AISC Specifications with materials manufactured to ASTM A529, Grade 50 steel. Tests to verify product performance were directed by Dr. Richard Redwood of McGill University.

New Nickel-Silver Handrails

A new line of handrail sections extruded from nickel-silver alloy is available from Julius Blum & Co., Inc.

Nickel-silver has a warm, silver glow. When polished, it has the appearance of stainless steel with a trace of gold.

If left unprotected, it will tarnish from a gray-brown to a finely mottled gray-green patina in about six years. (If the patina is not desired, the finish can be protected by applying either a high quality lacquer or wax.)

A new handrail material. Shown for the first time by Julius Blum & Co. in March 1993 — at METALfab — this handsome new line of handrail sections has attracted the favorable attention of numerous designers and fabricators.

Much of this interest has been generated by the properties and workability of nickel-silver — which is excellent when cold-worked and joined either by brazing or soldering.

Nickel-silver is, in fact, a copper alloy — CDA 798. The chemical composition is 47.7% copper, 7.4% nickel, 2% manganese, 2% lead, and 40.9% zinc. It contains no silver.

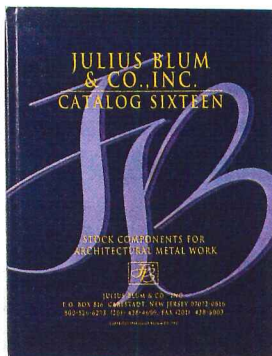

Mechanical Properties:

Allowable Bending Stress for Design	24000 psi
Expected Minimum Yield	40000 psi
Modulus of Elasticity	8×10^6

Julius Blum & Co. stocks two handsome and distinctly different handrail designs extruded from the nickel-silver alloy (section numbers 5235 and 5274). Both are stocked in a mill finish.

Cast corner bends and endpieces are also in stock, available with a #4 satin finish. And channels ($1\frac{1}{2}'' \times 1\frac{1}{2}'' \times \frac{1}{8}''$) and flat bars ($\frac{1}{8}'' \times 1\frac{1}{2}''$) in nickel-silver are available for closing the bottoms of the handrails, as necessary.

The wall bracket — number 193 — is also stocked in nickel-silver.

Catalog 16 also includes a complete Engineering Data section to assist in the proper structural design of various handrail systems.

Julius Blum & Co. railing systems have been developed to meet industry standards and code safety requirements when railings are designed and assembled in accordance with engineering data and instructions provided in the catalog. In addition, handrail brackets and facia mountings have been thoroughly tested for structural adequacy.

Building code requirements and safety rules vary from one locality and from one type of structure to another, and are subject to periodic revision. It is therefore incumbent upon designers to acquaint themselves with these regulations and comply with all codes and regulations governing each project.

Because details and availability are subject to change, a toll-free call will bring prompt answers to any questions about these materials.

The 20 series has visually graded spruce pine fir flanges, while the 32 series is manufactured with strong 2100 Fb., 1.8E MSR, kiln-dried solid sawn lumber flanges.

Gang-Lam LVL is thicker, wider, and longer than traditional lumber beams and has more load-bearing capacity. Made from ultrasonically graded Southern pine veneers and bonded together by exterior adhesives, Gang-Lam is ideal for use as beams, headers, and other primary load carrying members.

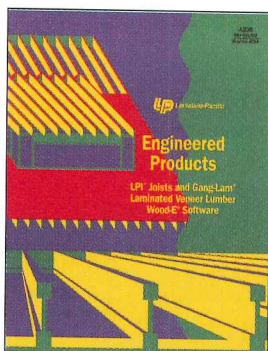

Louisiana-Pacific markets LPI Joists and Gang-Lam LVL under the name Solid Start™. They provide stronger floors and straighter ceilings, and reduce squeaks, dips, or uneven surfaces, warranted for the life of the home.

Together with Top Notch® T&G Flooring, L-P offers a complete floor system.

L-P's Wood-E® engineering software provides accurate designs for Gang-Lam LVL beams and LPI Joists, including multiple spans; uniform, concentrated, and trapezoidal loads; multiple load cases; sloping components; and more. Wood-E software interfaces with printer and plotter to provide printed output or plotted drawings. With the CAD program, installation details are available in DXF format for easy insertion into architectural plans.

The Wood-E Cut program enables you to keep your inventory under control by cataloging it on computer. Available through our distributors, L-P offers engineering review services for designs using our engineered wood products.

Applications. Formica Ligna™ goes anywhere wood veneer goes in retail, office, residential and hospitality installations.

Benefits. Formica Ligna™ combines laminate's consistent quality and ease of use with the warmth of real wood and dramatic designs that rival exotic species. Consistent coloration and graining make matching and joining easy.

Features. Traditional and fantasy patterns include cathedral, rift and planked cuts; birds-eye and burl; geometrics and abstracts; inlays; and metallic vein highlights. Colors range from traditional to vivid jewel tones.

Formica Ligna™ is available in a polyurethane finish, a matte melamine finish, or an unfinished surface to be stained and finished by the fabricator. Nominal sheet sizes are 4 ft. x 8 ft., and 4 ft. x 10 ft. Matching edgebanding rolls are 7/8-in. wide and 328-ft. long.

Formica Ligna™ is manufactured by Alpi S.p.A., and distributed exclusively by Formica Corporation.

A Silky, Sensuous Surface that's Tough as Nails and Great on Curves

Nuvel® surfacing material, from an alliance of Formica Corporation and General Electric Company, combines elegance, practicality, and exceptional postforming and thermoforming capabilities.

Applications. Nuvel® is perfect for countertops, table tops, kitchen and bathroom cabinets, and bath/shower surrounds.

Benefits. Nuvel® offers the best characteristics of solid surface material—seamless appearance and repairability—at a fraction of the weight.

A/D FIREFILM® a thin-film intumescent fireproofing that works as a decorative finish.

A/D FIREFILM® is decorative thin-film intumescent fireproofing for structural steel. It allows the designer to express the structure as an art form at interior locations in buildings where fire resistance ratings are required.

Features: Beneath its colorful surface, A/D FIREFILM is a thin film coating which intumesces when exposed to fire. In a fire, A/D FIREFILM expands to form a white, meringue-like layer, which insulates the structure from intense heat for up to two hours and protects the steel from fire. A topcoat, available in a variety of colors, allows for decorative leeway, and acts also as a protective finish.

Benefits: Because it is dust free, non-toxic and washable, A/D FIREFILM is ideal for processing plants, clean rooms, schools, hospitals, laboratories, food processing units and other similar facilities.

A/D FIREFILM can be spray applied for easy application. It is applied as a thin-film coating 0.016 to 0.120 in. thick. A/D FIREFILM is water based and contains no VOCs. It is resistant to impact, abrasion and most common chemicals.

Performance Capabilities: A/D FIREFILM has been tested and is certified by ULC and Warnock Hersey. Ratings up to two hours were attained in accordance with ASTM E119 and CAN/ULC-S101.

Other products offered: A/D also offers a full line of spray applied fireproofing products for interior and exterior applications, acoustical and thermal insulation and a complete family of firestop products.

Natural Trinity Slate® - The Most Durable Roofing Material

In the mid 1800s, the oldest slate deposits in North America were discovered on the Canadian Island of Newfoundland. Quarried from these deposits, which date back over 500 million years, Trinity Slates are the hardest and most durable in the world.

Benefits: Produced by North America's largest roof slate producer, Newfoundland Slate Inc., Trinity Slate is a finely textured natural product containing pleasing variations in shade, veining and grain.

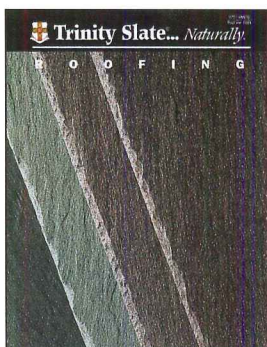

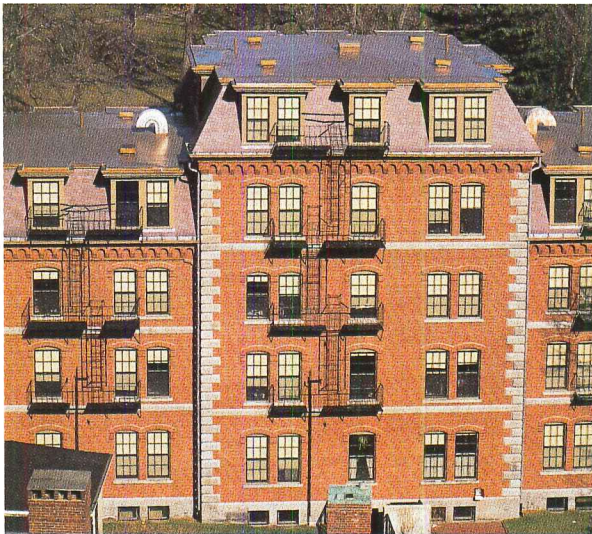

Used since the mid 1800s, our slate has proven to be unfading in color and can be matched at any future time. As the most durable roofing material, Trinity Slate has continuously provided a service life in excess of 100 years. Our most popular slate, Hues of Heather, has been used in varied projects, from private residences in Naples, Florida to institutional projects at Harvard University. Currently distributed in over 12 countries, on four continents, our slates have exceeded the testing requirements for each market area.

Performance capabilities: The exceptional performance of Trinity Slate is attributed to its mineral composition. Due to their age, the slates are practically nonabsorptive and completely resistant to the severest freeze-thaw cycles found in Newfoundland's climate.

Properties:

- Available in 6 natural unfading colors, including Heather, Plum Red, Hues of Heather, Variegated, Green and Black.
- Regular stock items include 25 sizes in 3 different thicknesses.
- Durable, and unfading in color
- Fireproof, noncombustible
- Not affected by exposure to frost.
- Maintenance Free
- Distributed World-wide
Available in SweetsSource.

Free Literature:

A complete Trinity Slate information package describing in detail how we make slates, how you can specify and use them, and how we can service your needs— will be immediately dispatched upon your inquiry.

Doors That Are Amazingly Easy to Open . . . From Ellison Bronze

Ellison Bronze invented the balanced door in 1928 as a means of equalizing interior and exterior building pressure.

About the product. Ellison Bronze Balanced Doors are renowned not only for their mechanical and structural excellence, but also for their flawless construction and aesthetic appeal. Ellison makes custom balanced doors in several basic configurations including: mirror and satin finished bronze, mirror and satin finished stainless steel, all glass, narrow stile (bronze or stainless), and aluminum doors in anodized or painted finishes. All operating hardware is manufactured in Ellison's Jamestown, New York facility.

Applications. Ellison Balanced Doors are well suited for any commercial or institutional building entrance where effortless door operation and durability are desired. They can be found in high-rise office buildings, small commercial structures, museums, universities, churches, retail stores and national monuments. In fact many original Ellison installations dating over 50 years are still in use.

Special features. Door check and closer housings are cast bronze manufactured in Ellison's own foundry. All Ellison doors, regardless of style or materials, carry a 10 year warranty which covers the entire door (except door pulls and hardware not manufactured by Ellison).

Product advantages. • It's the door that's easy to open. Any effect of exterior wind or interior suction is neutralized by the balanced door movement. • As the door opens, the latch stile travels in an elliptical arc. Because Ellison Doors travel in a more confined space the outward projection is reduced and less operating area is required. • Ellison's design concept is especially adaptable to large or heavy doors. In addition to the difficulty experienced when opening conventionally hinged heavy doors, consider the breakdown in operating hardware that often occurs under heavy wind loading. • The unique Ellison Hydraulic Checking unit is concealed overhead and can be removed without removing the door or any other hardware. Maintenance personnel can replace the unit in minutes.

FlameTech™ Series Frames, Sidelights, Borrowed Lights And Window Vision Kits

Commitment to service and engineering has made Summit Door one of the largest commercial door wholesalers in the United States.

A FlameTech™ product pays for itself in many ways — by its impressive appearance, its durability, and most important, in the peace of mind its great security affords.

Design. We realize that the look and feel of an interior space — not technical specifications — determine the quality of the time spent there. Our designs are achieved in consultation with engineers as well as architects. The result is graceful design you can trust.

FlameTech™ Frame. These frames are the perfect first building block in creating an entrance from an office corridor. Like all FlameTech™ products, our WHI approved and labeled frames are available in any wood density equaling or greater than Honduras mahogany, including oak, birch, walnut, and cherry, as well as the exotic species.

FlameTech™ Sidelight. The perfect partner to single or paired door frames is Summit Door's 20 minute sidelight. As with our vision frames and borrowed lights, all glass is installed with FireClips™ and either 1/4" wire glass or FireLite™ glass can be used. FireClips hold the glass even when the stops have burned away. Sidelights and paired frame openings as large as 9'0" x 17'8" are possible.

FlameTech™ Borrowed Light. Use these 20-minute rated lights to bring the outdoors in.

Or combine them with sidelights to make a window wall. Maximum assembly size is 84" by 104", with individual glass sizes up to 1296 sq. inches, and no dimension greater than 54". These assemblies can be combined to provide a virtually limitless variety of configurations.

FlameTech™ Vision Frame. Here's an easy and economical way to give an office a closed-door privacy without losing connection to the world outside. The beauty of a flush wood molding combined with a 20-minute rated glass gives you an attractive way to utilize vision frames and meet code requirements at the same time.

SpectraShield™ Finish Highlights New Technology at Cornell Iron Works

Rolling door specialists introduce powder coating process for smooth, uniform finish.

Rolling steel doors and grilles provide security against entry, weather, and fire. When open, they coil into a compact space above an opening, protected from potential damage. Cornell, with its SpectraShield™ powder coating line, now adds new aesthetics and more options for building and design professionals.

Applications. Cornell products are used to close openings and interior walls in every kind of non-residential building:

- ScreenGard™ perforated curtains allow visual access to interior spaces and permit air to circulate at storefronts and in areas where food is served or stored.

- Thermiser™ insulated doors greatly reduce heat transfer. Curtain slats are pressure filled with closed-cell urethane, formed-in-place. Thermiser curtains are top-rated among rolling doors with a U factor of 0.158, R value of 6.33.

- Grilles and enclosures provide security and clear sight lines at retail facades and parking garages. In industrial buildings, they control access to machinery.

- Fire-safe products—including fire doors, counter fire doors, horizontal fire closures, closing controls, and operators—offer a choice of many ways to fit a door to a firewall and a closing control to a building alarm system.

Special features. Cornell's technical expertise, engineering, and shop skills offer creative solutions for many special security and access applications, including light-tight doors and shutters, sound barrier doors, corrosion-resistant tank covers, high-cycle doors, dual closures, escalator covers, and more.

Finishes. SpectraShield powder-coating finish in 24 running line colors plus custom options is durable and cost-effective. Additional finishes include baked-on polyester enamel, hot dipped galvanized, brushed satin stainless, and more.

EFCO Corporation, RotoSwing™ R-4 Automatic Balanced Doors

RotoSwing automatic balanced doors provide easy opening under wind or structural pressures and can be used to satisfy ADA requirements.

Available as conventional entrances, fully automatic systems, or as low-energy power operated entrances, RotoSwing automatic balanced doors use specially located pivot points to equalize air and building forces and minimize the surface area that can be affected by wind.

Fully automatic packages are typically activated by motion detectors or floor mats. (Floor mats or presence sensors with safety beams are required in conjunction with guide rails for safety.)

Low-energy entrances operate with a variety of actuating switches for automatic use but open manually for regular use. (The low-energy systems do not require guide rails, safety mats, presence sensors or safety beams.)

Actuating options. RotoSwing doors offer a fully automated mode activated by floor mats or motion detectors ... and manual/automatic mode activated by wired or wireless wall switches, rail-mounted jamb switches, strip switches, hand-held remotes, card readers, or key pads.

Other important features: Door stops safely if obstructed by a pedestrian • Long-life permanent magnet DC motor and double-sealed ball bearings • Adjustable torque limiter prevents damage if door is obstructed • Lubrication free for low maintenance • Position controls for latch, backcheck and open-stop • Opening and closing force adjustments • Instant recycle • Quiet, smooth operation • Completely concealed operator and hinge shaft • Manual operation when power is off.

Intumescent Fire and Smoke Seals — From Zero International

The Zero Intumescent Seal has been developed as a safe, efficient system for sealing the air space between wood and metal doors and their frames in the event of a fire.

Under the action of heat and/or fire, the intumescent material (FS3003 & FS6886) foams and expands to fill the gap — which prevents penetration by hot gasses, smoke, heat and flames for up to 3 hours. Because the material expands to fill the opening completely it will also block airborne particles, soot, and toxic by-products generated by fire.

However, the intumescent seal will not hinder the opening of the sealed door ... and the reservoir capacity of the intumescent material is sufficient to reseal the joint if the door is closed again.

There are two types of intumescent materials — soft and hard puff. Zero uses a soft puff material which will start to foam and expand at approximately 250° F and continues to expand with rising heat. Hard puff intumescent will expand all at once and empty the reservoir. The hard puff material may also expand with sufficient pressure to open the door unless closure strength pressure is increased to an unacceptable level.

By integrating intumescent material into its quality door sealing system, Zero is able to meet the most demanding requirements. The FS3003 intumescent has been tested in accordance with the following: UL1784, NFPA 105 (1989) smoke control door assemblies, 180 minute (3 hour) fire test in accordance with ASTM E152, CAN-4S 104, CSFM 12-4, NFPA 252, UBC 43-2 and UL10B British Standard Institution (BSI) B5476 Part 22 fire test for building materials and structures.

To help insure the best solutions to fire and smoke control requirements, Zero's Engineering Department can provide specification and installation information for all Zero materials, components and sealing systems.

The Sharpest Reflective Surface for Bath Enclosures

Mirage™ from Libbey-Owens-Ford is a revolutionary new glazing material. The durable reflective surface is an integral part of the glass.

Applications. While Mirage™ has initially been used for bath enclosures, architects and interior designers see a future for it in room dividers, signage and wall decor in residential, hospitality and commercial projects.

Benefits. Mirage™ delivers a surface that is both see-through and reflective, depending on the amount of light transmittance from the uncoated side.

Mirage™ is a true reflective surface free from double images and distortions. Compared with conventional bath-enclosure glass, this unique product conveys images that are sharp and crisp.

Mirage™ resists scratching, rubbing off, fading or corroding under conditions of normal use and cleaning with commercially available brands of liquid glass cleaners.

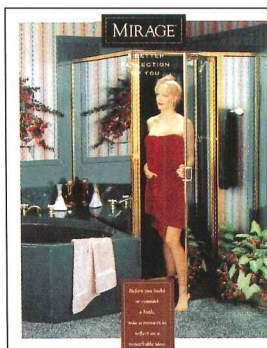

Not even the corrosive effect of salt air can mar its beauty.

Performance Capabilities. Because Mirage™ reflective glass is an integral product, it can be v-grooved, etched, beveled, and silk-screened to create a wide variety of design alternatives.

It is bendable and temperable and recycles as ordinary glass.

LOF Introduces the Sun Management System

A new glazing technology that gives architects and designers creative aesthetic design freedom while helping owners reduce their energy bills and increase comfort level — regardless of climate.

The Sun Management System is a synergistic glazing technology for optimizing the thermal performance of insulating glass units—in new construction as well as renovations. The system combines an inboard lite of high performance, pyrolytically coated Energy Advantage Low-E with an outboard lite of one of LOF's solar control panels. The result is an I.G. unit that decreases both heating and cooling costs, yet still provides a variety of aesthetic options.

Originally conceived to reduce winter heat loss, LOF's Energy Advantage Low-E has long been known for its ability to keep building interiors warmer in cooler climates. Less recognized is its ability to inhibit solar radiant heat transfer into building interiors—to keep buildings cooler in summer.

Using the Sun Management System on commercial buildings can result in substantial energy savings over the lifetime of a building...and it is equally effective regardless of where the construction project is located, north or south, east or west.

The performance qualities of pyrolytically coated glass allow for handling, cutting, bending, insulating, laminating, and tempering using standard float glass techniques. A number of design options are available.

Libbey-Owens-Ford Co. is one of the world's leading producers of float glass for use in architectural, furniture, mirror, and specialty products. LOF is a member of the Pilkington Group.

EFCO Corporation, Don Reynolds New, Dry-Glaze Approach to Wall Cladding

Prefabricated silicone gaskets prevent leakage and condensation, and cut job-site costs.

EFCO's Don Reynolds series of curtain wall products uses structural-silicone gaskets for the weather sealing and mechanical retention of all infills.

Benefits. The aluminum grid is totally encapsulated by gaskets to protect all expansion joints and mullions from air and water. The gasket acts as a thermal break, to prevent internal condensation. Each gasket is a fully fabricated frame with molded corners, ready for quick application. Field labor is 20% to 40% lower than for pressure-plate curtain walls.

Each gasket is individually installed, and can be removed without disturbing adjacent panels.

Unlike wet-applied sealant systems, glazing with silicone gaskets can take place under adverse weather and temperature conditions.

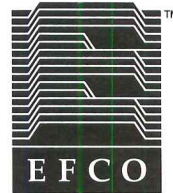

Features. Don Reynolds can accommodate single- and multiple-glazing units, windows, doors, louvers, flat metal panels, tray panels, shaped panels, fire-rated panels, and opaque look-alike glass units.

To reassure insulated-glass manufacturers, the system incorporates a horizontal mullion drain cord that passes into the vertical, and a unique molded drainage funnel at each vertical-mullion expansion joint to ensure continuity of drainage through metal-to-metal joints.

New aluminum-extrusion configurations may be developed for specific project design requirements. Twenty-nine standard colors are available; special colors can be developed.

Materials Used. The Don Reynolds silicone compound is an exclusive formulation that balances structural load-holding capabilities with a modulus that provides a super-efficient seal, fully front-sealing the system against the elements and environmental contamination.

Get the FiberBond® Advantage — Fiber-Reinforced Gypsum Wallboard Panels

Louisiana-Pacific's FiberBond® fiber-reinforced gypsum wallboard panels outperform conventional gypsum wallboard in residential, commercial, and industrial applications.

FiberBond wallboard panels are designed for use on interior walls and ceilings in both standard and fire-rated applications, where extra durability is required. Recycled cellulose fiber and gypsum are blended throughout the panel, resulting in a strong, solid panel that resists denting, breaking, and puncturing. To further enhance FiberBond's impact resistance, a layer of fiberglass mesh is applied to one side of the wallboard panel to create FiberBond VHI (very high impact) wall panels. This added durability makes them ideal for high-traffic areas.

Advantages. FiberBond has no fragile paper surfaces that can bubble or blister. It resists surface abrasion and impact damage, providing less damage during construction and reduced maintenance in the future. FiberBond also offers increased load-carrying capacity in engineered shear wall applications. Its strength provides superior nail, screw, and adhesive-holding ability that virtually eliminates fastener pops. The smooth, even surface provides a base for a variety of wall coverings, while the superb adhesion properties make it an excellent substrate for wall and ceiling tile installations.

Code Approvals. All FiberBond wallboard panels are fire-resistant and have a Class 1 rating for flame spread, smoke development, and fuel contribution when tested in accordance with ASTM E 84 and CAN/ULC-S102. The 1/2" (12.7 mm) and 5/8" (15.9 mm) wallboard panels have been approved for use in New York City. The panels carry SBCCI PST & ESI Report No. 9545 and BOCA Evaluation Report No. 91-13. The panels carry CCMC Evaluation Report No. 123-790-R.

Specifications. FiberBond wallboard and VHI panels are available in three thicknesses: 3/8" (9.5 mm), 1/2" (12.7 mm), and 5/8" (15.9 mm). Standard width is 48" (1220 mm) with lengths of 8', 9', 10', and 12' (2440 mm, 2743 mm, 3048 mm, and 3658 mm, respectively). Oversize panels up to 8' x 24' are available upon request. FiberBond exterior wall sheathing is also available.

STI's Damage Stoppers Protect the Protectors

Safety Technology International, Inc. offers a complete line of Damage Stopper protection for detection/alarm devices.

Steel Web Stopper. Especially appropriate where physical abuse to smoke detectors is greatest—such as correctional facilities and public buildings in crime districts. The strong, web-like construction of steel wire takes tough knocks in stride. Two models (one for high profile, one for low) fit virtually all smoke detectors. STI-9601—Low Profile, STI-9609—High Profile are both U.L. listed.

Motion Detector Damage Stopper. Recommended for areas where vandalism or accidental damage is prevalent.

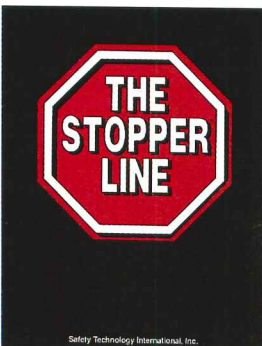

The tough 9-gauge steel wire guard protects motion detectors from a thrown object or a blow from a fist or book. Tests show that the guard does not materially affect the sensor's range or detectability. Economical and easy to install, this Damage Stopper increases the security of a safety system and reduces maintenance costs. (STI-9620)

Smoke Detector Damage Stopper is a low-cost, easy-to-install solution to smoke detector damage. It features a strong, durable design of molded polycarbonate and is Factory Mutual approved. The device may be painted to match decor and is easily removed for servicing. Note: This product will somewhat inhibit smoke entry, but if detectors are frequently put out of service due to damage, the Smoke Detector Damage Stopper may provide a valuable solution. The product has a lifetime guarantee. (Flush Mounted: STI-8100 Surface Mounted: STI-8130)

Horn/Strobe Damage Stopper.

A tough, durable cover designed to stop vandalism and accidental damage to the horn/strobe alarm unit of a fire alarm system... without limiting performance. Horizontal slots allow the horn's sound to be heard with minimal decibel loss. It also features a locking mechanism and a lifetime guarantee against breakage and damage in normal use. (STI-1220) UL listed.

STI's Stopper® line puts a stop to false alarms

A recognized leader in the securities and fire alarm field, Safety Technology International, Inc. (STI) manufactures a unique range of products that while on duty against fires, guard also against false alarms, vandalism and other nuisances related to installation of the device in public spaces.

Benefits: STI's best known product, the patented Stopper® II, which helps prevent false alarms without restricting legitimate alarms, is in public facilities across the United States and Canada. Approved by the fire prevention authorities, the Stopper II sounds a piercing warning when accessed, so that the prankster will either run or be caught.

Features: Some other notable products from STI's full range of over 40 products include:

Mini Stopper® II: A smaller version of the Stopper II, the mini-stopper is used to protect pull stations and other devices mounted on a standard single-gang electrical box.

Audible/Visible Signal Damage Stopper®: A clear, 1/8" thick polycarbonate construction helps prevent vandalism and accidental damage, without limiting performance.

Break-Glass Stoppers®: This version of the patented Stopper II is designed for areas where a "Break Glass" cover is specified. It is available in two sizes to fit virtually all manual pull stations.

Widebody Keypad Protector:

This tough, polycarbonate cover extends the life and reliability of wider digital keypads and other access control devices.

Accessories: The Keypad Protector becomes even more valuable with 1" and 2" acrylic spacers, weather gaskets and a heater kit for cold weather areas.

Fire Extinguisher Theft Stopper®:

This easy to install Theft Stopper has a highly visible red "stop" sign design. If extinguisher is removed, self-contained alarm system sounds.

STI's Stopper Line: The Latest in Technology, Innovation, and Economy

Safety Technology International has specialized in security systems for almost 25 years and has designed and installed thousands of systems worldwide.

STI's Stopper Line includes:

Stopper II: Made of tamper-proof, clear Lexan® polycarbonate, a shield and frame fit easily over manual pull stations. When lifted, it sounds a piercing alarm that draws immediate attention to the pull station and prankster. Use-proven in thousands of applications — including colleges, schools, hospitals, nursing homes, correctional institutions, hotels/motels and stores. (STI-1100) There is a lifetime guarantee on the molded polycarbonate cover. The product is U.L. listed, FM approved, ULC listed.

Weather Stopper II: Extends the life and reliability of weather-exposed manual pull stations...such as those in salt air locations or installed inside car washes or other severe environments. Weather Stopper II is available in two versions — for flush-mounted stations (STI-1250), and for surface-mounted units (STI-3150). The basic design is the same as Stopper II (above), but does not contain an electrical warning system. (An alarm system can be added if needed.)

Mini Theft Stopper: To help stop vandalism and theft of fire extinguishers. Inexpensive and extremely versatile, it has a variety of applications. The Mini Theft Stopper can be used on a fire extinguisher cabinet door, or on cabinets housing fire hoses, sprinkler shut-off valves and similar equipment. (STI-6251 and STI-6252)

Exit Stopper: Helps stop unauthorized exit and entry through fire/emergency doors when you must leave them "unlocked" to allow for emergency exit. It alerts you that an unauthorized entry or exit is being made and discourages the practice.

Remote installation of the 120 decibel horn available. Keyed on/off operation allows authorized exits. (STI-6400)

Wiedemann Church Products

Wiedemann sets the standard for excellence in fiberglass church products, including baptistries, spires, and crosses. Wiedemann can provide all the usual requirements for church construction or remodeling, and will custom-design its products to meet the architectural requirements of any church.

Baptistries by Wiedemann feature fiberstressing, a manufacturing process that is so superior that Wiedemann offers up to 35 years on its warranty. With more than 150 baptistry floor plans to choose from, all designed with a Wiedemann innovation—a gently sloping floor with a recessed drain—Wiedemann baptistries include plumbing kits, heaters, windows, and water control systems that reduce installation costs. Wiedemann is currently the only baptistry listed by the International Association of Plumbing and Mechanical Officials (IAPMO); they also produce the only baptistries listed by the IAPMO.

Spires by Wiedemann are unit-molded for extra strength and durability. Many graceful styles are available to enhance the beauty of any church, and special spires can be custom-designed. Translucent spires are constructed of anodized aluminum and opalescent plexiglass, and interior lighting provides their warm glow at night. Steel reinforced mounting brackets assure years of stability and protection against storms and high-velocity winds, and lightning protection is also a standard feature on all Wiedemann spires.

Dramatic Tensioned Membrane Structures and Air Supported Domes and Buildings

Once associated solely with the air supported structures we pioneered in the early 1950's...

...Birdair is now credited by designers around the world, with the emergence of the durable tensioned membrane structure utilizing Teflon coated woven Fiberglass and other architectural membranes.

Since 1973, Birdair has constructed well over 200 tension membrane structures utilizing in excess of 20 million square feet of architectural membrane. Employees work in a Total Quality Management environment in pursuit of complete customer satisfaction. Team effort is an essential element of every project. Our modern 70,000 square feet Amherst, New York world headquarters houses an ultra-clean manufacturing area, plus state of the art production, quality assurance, research and testing facilities.

About the product. Birdair tensioned membrane structures and air supported domes and buildings are manufactured from a variety of membranes. These materials range from PVC based fabrics to SHEERFILL Architectural Membrane — a woven Fiberglass substrate with a Teflon PTFE coating. The recommendation of a specific membrane depends on the proposed structure's size, shape, function, life cycle expectations, and economics.

Special features. Teflon coated woven Fiberglass offers outstanding performance characteristics which include: • Extensive life cycle — A typical installation can maintain 70% of its original specified strength after 20 years. • Translucency —

SHEERFILL provides up to 22% transmission of natural, color balanced and diffuse light. • Durability — Erected in virtually every climate, the Teflon coating is chemically inert and sunlight keeps it bleached. • Low maintenance — Due to surface hydrophobicity, rain water helps keep the material clean and new looking. There is no relaxation of Birdair tensioned membrane after 20 years of service. • Energy conservation — Daytime lighting and HVAC costs are significantly reduced. • Aesthetics & signature — The daytime brilliance, nighttime glow, and spectacular shapes of translucent roofs yield an unmistakable signature.

The Birdair logo consists of the word "BIRDAR" in a bold, sans-serif font. The letters are filled with horizontal lines, giving it a textured, three-dimensional appearance.

Lift Systems from Matot, Inc.

Matot. Over 100 years of reliable service. Affordable, space saving elevators and dumbwaiters.

Applications. Matot elevators are ideal for low-rise contract and residential settings, whether new construction or retrofits.

Benefits. Matot elevators are the affordable way to pack a lot of efficiency into very tight spaces, and also enhance independence for people with disabilities. All designs are engineered for the lowest possible energy consumption. Prewired modular construction helps simplify installation and control costs.

Features. Three styles offer roped hydraulic, winding drum, or traction drives.

Nominal speeds range from 30 to 36 ft per minute, carrying capacities range from 450 to 700 lbs., and lifting heights range from 36 to 50 ft. Standard size is 36"Wx48"Dx80"H. Each style has a 60"D Series II version with 25- to 50-ft lifting heights—ideal for churches, club houses, community centers, and other groups pledged to keep disabled members in the mainstream of activity. Cabs also can be built in almost any size or design configuration.

Each unit includes cables and guide rails, emergency switch, hand crank, battery-operated light and alarm, final-limit switches, telephone, and gate interlocks for safety.

Matot lift products meet ANSI-17.1.

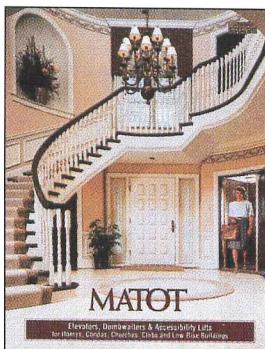

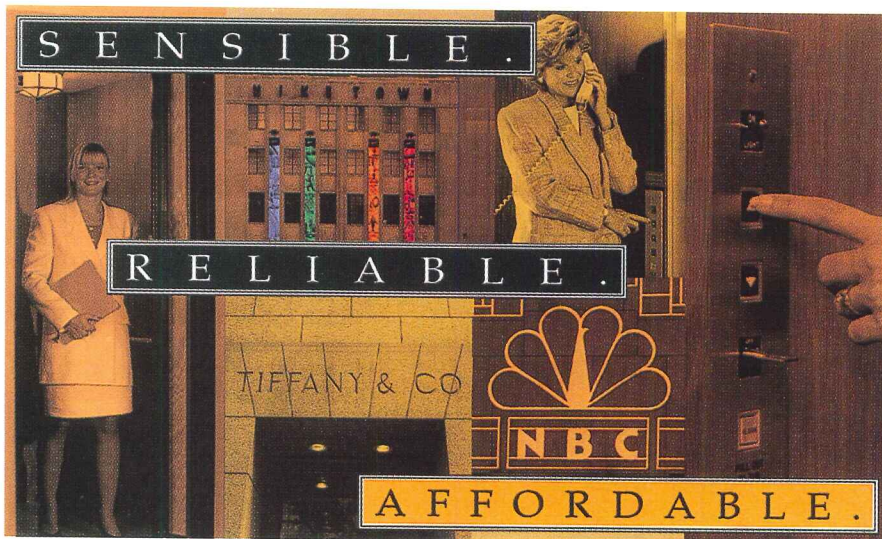

Materials Used. Interiors may be oak veneer or wood-grain laminate with brass, stainless steel, or goldtone anodized-aluminum accents. Recessed or crystal/brass light fixtures are available, or specifiers may supply their own.

Warranty Information. Matot lift products carry a two-year limited warranty.

Other Products Offered. Light-duty Ambassador dumbwaiters with winding-drum drives fit in tight spots and end the need to carry awkward loads up to 200 lbs. on stairs.

“Floor Mate” Access Floor Box

An all-metal, flush access floor electrification unit for use with floor systems.

The ultimate in protection. The “Floor-Mate’s” Zamak III die-cast steel cover and frame — and 14 gauge galvanized steel enclosure — offer unequalled security from pounding, piercing, and pouring. The one-piece cover, which can be rotated 180° without tools, will support a 400 lb. rolling load. And the carpet/tile flange is sufficiently wide to secure carpet ends and support the weight of the box.

In addition, a patented “Cable Guard” rises to a vertical position from the cover, encasing the exiting wires in a protective well. This feature precludes damage or accidental shearing from kicks and knocks. In the closed position, the “Cable Guard” automatically serves as the abandonment mode, maintaining integrity until actuation.

Versatility. The “Floor-Mate” is also the most versatile access floor box on the market. There are four duplex knockouts on the high tension power side of the enclosure which can accommodate a standard duplex, isolated ground, and surge suppressor, plus one outlet for optional service. Activate them as needed.

On the low tension side, you have total flexibility, with provision for data, modular phone, communications, twin axial, and coaxial connections.

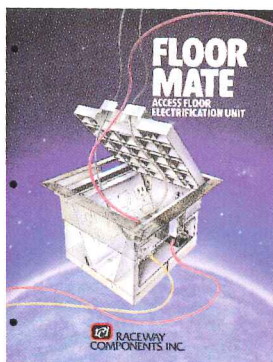

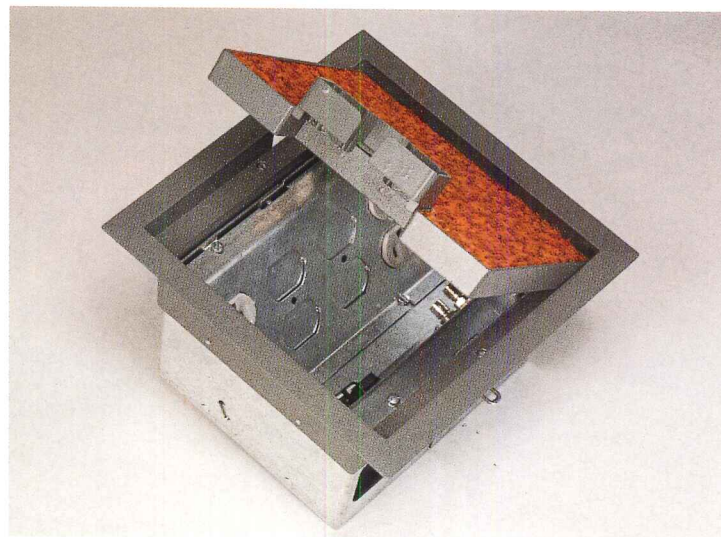

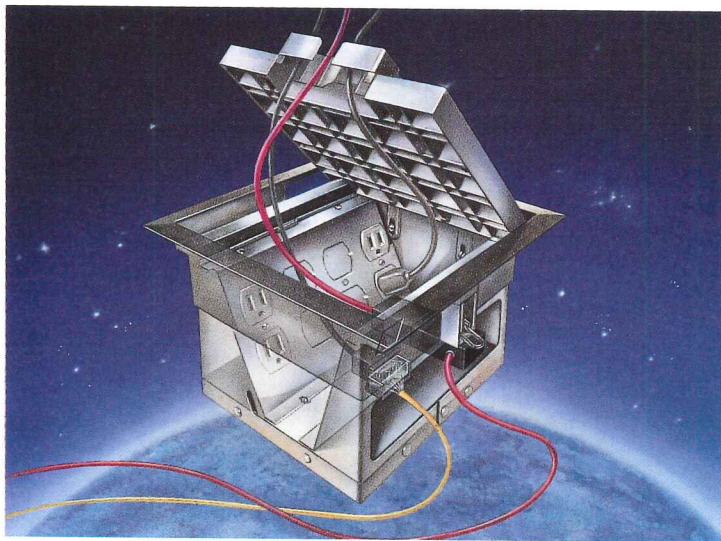

A variety of disconnects may be selected to accommodate equipment in the workstation.

Low and high tension outlets are on alternately positioned faceplates to avoid conflicts. And all connections are located on the side of the box which avoids the sharp wire bends common to bottom-exiting cables.

Installation. Hidden toggle screws and exclusive “riding slots” enable the 8” x 8” (or 8” x 10”) unit to be installed securely, quickly, and easily — even on uneven slabs. The toggle screws enable a vertical adjustment capability of as much as 3/4”.

Free Literature:

A 4-page product folder on the “Floor-Mate” line of access floor boxes is available from Raceway. It includes text descriptions, photos, installation information, and details on size and wiring configurations that can be obtained.

An 8-page catalog covering all of Raceway’s advanced products, systems and technology for thru-floor electrification and wire distribution is also available.

“Quad Flush Poke-Thru” Floor Fitting

A dual service flush floor fitting capable of handling four power outlets (double duplex), plus data and communication pass-thru wiring.

Twice the power. Raceway, the originator of the first full-capacity Flush Poke-Thru, has doubled the capacity with the new RC-900 Series. It features four power outlets instead of only two... at no increase in size. In addition, the unit features two individual low tension openings for an abundance of voice/data capacity.

Unique design. Providing the clean, unobtrusive esthetics of a Flush Poke-Thru, the “Quad” Series has been specially designed to accommodate today’s greater demand for power and can be used at the busiest workstations.

Power is served through the center of the device, while communications — as well as data or signal — are handled by two outer openings. The ground slots in the new Series have also been realigned, and all grounds are grouped to the center. The unit is available as a standard or isolated ground and is U.L. classified for 2 hours.

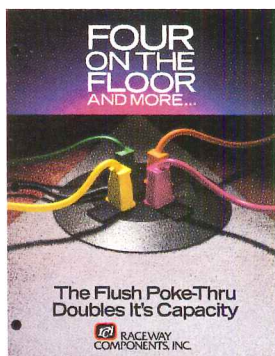

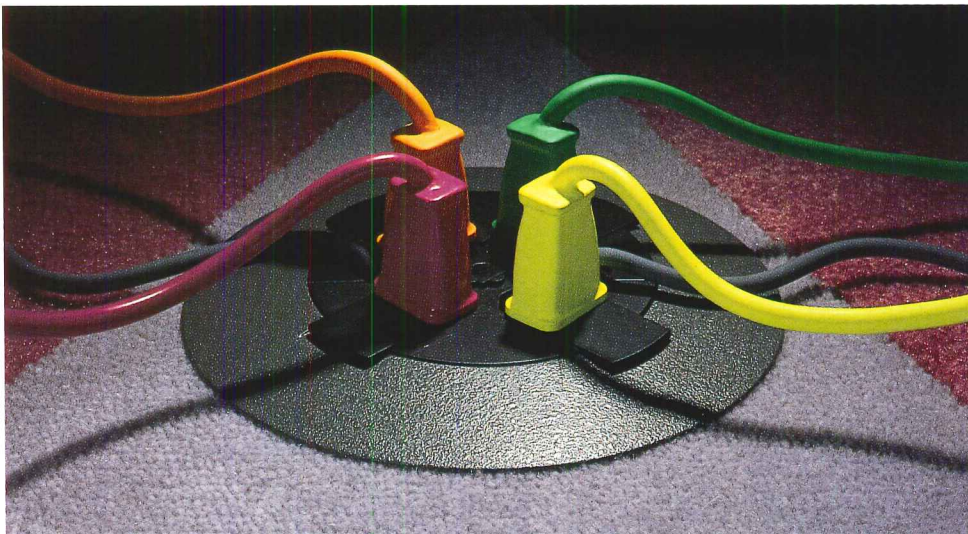

The flush service head has a carpet flange of die-cast aluminum alloy, finished in a textured epoxy paint. Color coordination choices are available for the carpet flanges. Each receptacle is of thermoset plastic, with a sturdy polycarbonate slide cover. The receptacle interior contains additional slides that create “dead front” covers for each of the power outlets when not energized.

Installation. The unit comes with a retainer, as well as the necessary organic intumescent material, for securing the device into the slab in a 3” cored hole. High tension and low tension isolation are maintained through the device, with high tension termination in the junction box that comes with the unit. The “Quad” receptacle is pre-wired which means it can easily be replaced in the field.

Accessories such as a COM.50 adapter and MQ-8 type connectors (for AT&T™ Wiring) are available.

LUCEPLAN USA Features Lighting Classics

Three lines from Luceplan USA demonstrate the spectacular fluidity of light.

The sophisticated designs which Paolo Rizzatto and Alberto Meda have created for Luceplan speak for themselves — their language being one of form, movement, light and color.

These highly distinctive forms, through fluidity and grace, remain legendary classics years after their creation — providing illumination and a touch of elegance to interior spaces.

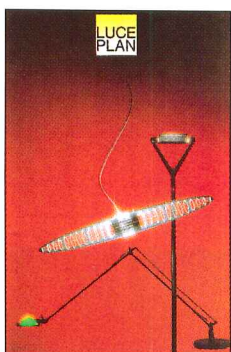

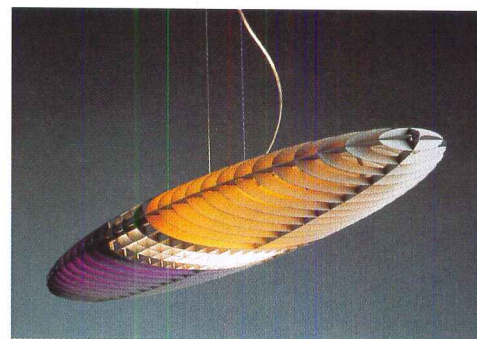

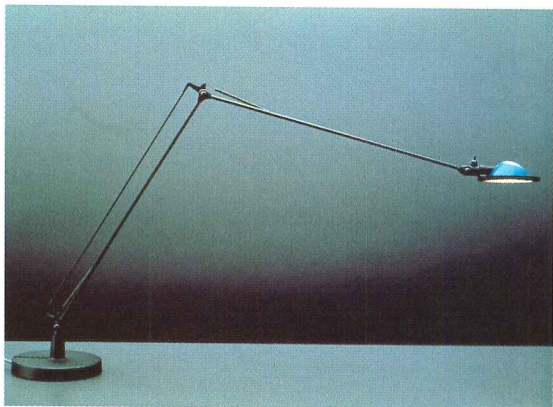

Berenice. Fluid movement and ease of articulation characterize this elegant series of adjustable lamps. Generous illumination is provided by a 35 watt/12 volt halogen lamp powered by an in-line transformer located at the end of the cord. The 360-degree movement is facilitated by a tactile ring of heat-resistant "Rynite" or by a small safety handle. Berenice is available as a table lamp, a desk clamp, and wall-mounting and floor models.

Costanza. This elegant series of lamps features a solid cast-aluminum base, carefully milled for a circular satin finish, with a telescoping rod providing height adjustment for the incandescent lamp assembly. A 16" diameter polycarbonate shade, available in a variety of colors, maintains its conical form, held together by aluminum snap-rivets. The 150-watt light source is regulated by an on-off switch or touch-sensitive dimming rod.

Titania. This airplane-wing-like suspension lamp features the leading-edge technology of a computer-aided design and an advanced chemical milling process on high purity aluminum. Titania contains a 150/250-watt double-envelope halogen lamp, and glides up and down on a transparent nylon cable. Additionally, polycarbonate color inserts are supplied, which can completely change the color of the internally reflected light — and the entire lamp. Also available as a floor or table lamp.

LUCEPLAN USA's "Metropoli" Series Shines Brightly—Indoors or Outdoors

A new line of lighting fixtures exemplifies beauty of form and quality of material.

Designers Alberto Meda and Paolo Rizzatto, along with project coordinator Riccardo Sarfatti, set out to design a new line of lighting fixtures that combined beauty, high quality, and versatility in both interior and exterior environments. Their creation, the Metropoli series from Luceplan USA, has succeeded beyond their imaginations.

The Metropoli series is both elementary and elegant. But more importantly, it's flexible: allowing a choice of energy-saving light sources, and providing a range of interchangeable inner reflectors. For such a unique design, the creators won Italy's prestigious 1994 Compasso D'Oro (Gold Compass Award) for design excellence.

Features. Metropoli offers a die-cast aluminum body with a natural polished aluminum or polyester paint finish. Reflector assemblies are available using either incandescent or compact fluorescent sources. Four sizes, from D20/17 (7" diameter, 3.2" height) to D20/56 (22" diameter, 6.3" height) are available, and all are UL listed for wet or dry locations.

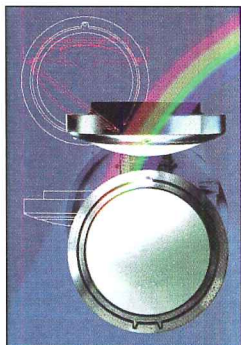

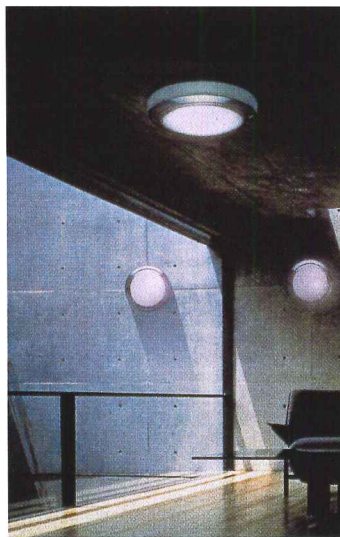

Benefits. Metropoli's sealed enclosure blocks out the elements, keeping reflector assemblies virtually dust-free. The single-screw enclosure enables the user to quickly and easily replace the lamp. In addition, the use of com-act fluorescent sources permits low energy consumption.

Applications. Metropoli can be placed on a ceiling or wall, indoors or outdoors, and in corridors, public spaces, and lobbies.

Luceplan's Metropoli illuminates the future of lighting.

Luxo Introduces the Boréns Line of Ambient Lights

Designed for use in office, commercial and hospitality settings.

The Boréns line is designed by Luxo's sister-company in Sweden, and consists of sconce, pendant and ceiling-mounted fixtures. The fixtures have clean, elegant lines which strike an effective balance between form and function. The lights are powered by compact fluorescent and halogen lamps which provide high levels of lighting and add subtle light accents in certain design settings. The line provides decorative lighting with a distinct, expressive design — classic elegance in the Scandinavian tradition.

Walle-Maxi provides beauty, quality and energy efficiencies. This wall-mounted luminaire provides the perfect combination of perforated metal and opal acrylic diffusers. An excellent choice for lobbies, hallways, restaurants and public spaces. Meets A.D.A. requirements.

Urania is a pendant mounted, triple stem, indirect luminaire set in a spun round housing with a flat disk placed 2" below the shade to illuminate the shade's underside. This ceiling suspended unit is an effective solution to the uplighting needs of large commercial spaces.

Sun is an elegant lighting accent for wall spaces in commercial, hospitality and residential settings. This energy-efficient luminaire works effectively when arranged in a row or in groups.

MIKADO Low Voltage, Halogen Track System

MIKADO: Now a complete track system for increased performance and flexibility of application from Artemide Litech.

Through major design, technical and engineering changes, designer F.A. Porsche and Artemide have overcome all the limitations of the system introduced three years ago. Through the Artemide/Porsche team efforts, the Mikado has evolved into a complete low voltage, halogen track system, while preserving the unique features of design that have merited this product design awards and great sales success. The major advantages of the new Mikado Track over the previously introduced system are:

- Positioning of spotlights anywhere on the conductor profile

- Quick and easy snap on and off spotlight adaptor
- New rod-extended spotlights
- Flexibility of installation with remote transformer or canopy incorporated transformer

MIKADO: Complemented by Mikado Suspension & Mikado Ceiling/Wall.

The Mikado system continues to be complemented by ceiling, wall and suspension single fixtures to fill the particular application needs a track system can't. For added flexibility of application the Mikado ceiling/wall single fixture is now available for remote transformer or canopy incorporated transformer installation.

The track is extruded aluminum, available anodized in black, grey, red, or blue.

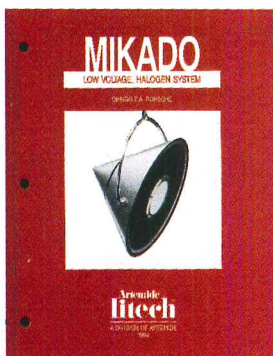

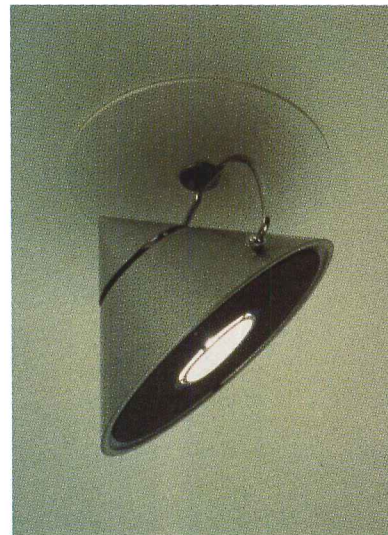

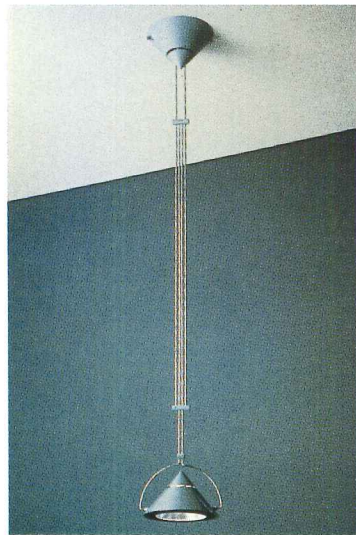

The spotlights, of die cast aluminum with metallic lacquer grey finish, are available in two diameter sizes: 12cm (4-3/4") and 16cm (6-1/4"). Chrome extension rods of 30cm (11-3/4") and 60cm (23-5/8") are also available.

The lamping: Spotlight 12 (4-3/4"d) — max 1x75W/12V, halogen MR 16 lensed. Spotlight 16 (6-1/4"d) — max 1x75W/12V, halogen MR 16 lensed.

Accessories include an anti-dazzle ring or an adjustable directional baffle.

Ron Rezek Designs for Linear Fluorescent

Ron Rezek Lighting has recently introduced a wide selection of products based on the energy saving T-8 fluorescent lamps. The designs vary from the simple, economic Basic Strip and Zimmer models to the more decorative Flute and Doric Lights.

They are intended to replace incandescent sources in such applications as bathroom and hallway lighting. The T-8 lamp, when combined with an electronic ballast, saves 40% of the energy of a standard fluorescent and more than 500% of the energy cost of an incandescent bulb. They also last 10,000 hrs. — or at least ten times the life of an incandescent product. The savings in energy, relamping, and in lamp theft make these products very attractive to the institutional and hospitality designers and specifiers.

The Basic Strip is stocked in two lengths (24" and 36"), and two finishes (clear anodized aluminum with chrome ends, and white with white ends).

The Zimmer is a sturdy strip light made in 24", 36", and 48" lengths, and either all white or clear anodized aluminum. It is designed to be ganged for a continuous run.

The Doric is intended specifically for use with a bath mirror. The design is asymmetric so that the lamps point at your face. These fixtures can be used on both sides pointing inward or, above a mirror pointing down. We recommend using 3000K lamps with these in bath applications to give the most flattering skin tones. They are stocked in white or aluminum, but can be custom finished in a great variety of anodized or painted finishes.

The Flute is the answer if a diffused fluorescent is preferable. This design has proved itself with installations in many hotels around the world over the last three years. The end caps are produced in two styles, the rounded one shown and a squared version, and in three finishes: polished brass, polished chrome, and white. The Flute is available in 14", 26", 39", and 50" lengths, with either one or two lamps.

Series 9000 In-Grade Lighting Fixtures from Hydrel

HYDREL introduces NINE new engineering advances for in-grade lighting . . . and every one of them saves time and money:

1. Modular design
2. precision reflectors
3. Optically active lenses
4. Rough-in section
5. Thermal cutoff
6. Watertight connectors
7. Triple sealed ballast
8. Underwater seals
9. Dry air purge

Modular Design Makes All the Difference. Foremost among the most significant advances in 40 years for in-grade lighting is modular design. Water penetration ceases to be a problem when all critical components — lamp, ballast and connectors — are installed as presealed watertight modules.

With the Hydrel 9000 Series, installation becomes 50% faster and maintenance is no longer a tricky problem. Which amounts to time and money saved.

Hydrel's 9000 Series takes advantage of state-of-the-art seals developed for underwater lighting, plus dry air purging during sealing at the factory . . . and moisture doesn't have a chance to enter during relamping because it can be done in a clean, dry environment to assure watertight sealing as you replace lamp and silicone gasket.

When today's smaller, more efficient lamps are combined with Hydrel's new precision reflectors, the result is outstanding performance. Increased reflector-to-source area ratios provide increased light control and I.T.L. reported efficiencies to 85%.

If you look at the numbers, you will see some startling gains in performance. If you look at the lighting effects shown in the new 9000 Series catalog, you'll see some creative opportunities never before possible. No matter how you look at it, the 9000 Series makes a difference you can measure.

Free Literature:

The beautiful, new 9000 Series catalog provides details on new breakthroughs in design, installation, and applications, as well as performance testing, accessories, and a specification guide. It is a valuable source of inspiration and information.

$35 BILLION WILL BE SPENT OVER THE NEXT THREE YEARS ON K THROUGH 12 SCHOOL CONSTRUCTION*

*F. W. Dodge.

The number of school-age children is booming. From top to bottom, the existing educational plant in most urban areas is in shambles. And 30 percent more space is needed per pupil. There's an explosion in special programs that targets the needs of students with learning disabilities or outstanding talents. Computers are now basic tools of education . . . and they require lots of extra footage. And most classes will be made up of 20 pupils — instead of 30 or more, requiring additional classrooms. . . . And That Means More Schools Have To Be Built!

Now "School Ways" Provides:

■ An important analysis of building forecasts for new schools. ■ An in-depth examination of changing approaches to education that will shape school design. ■ A concise history of school design. ■ A key chapter on emerging trends by Perkins & Will architect William Brubaker. ■ As well as detailed profiles on 50 important completed educational construction projects, model photographs and plans of schools currently on the boards, a discussion of educational technology, and much more.

Who Should Read "School Ways"?

Architects, architecture students, school administrators, school board members, and others concerned about education.

"The greatest thing in this world is not so much where we are, but in what direction we are moving."

—Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes

In your choice of building materials, the right direction is to use renewable resources.

Pressure treating wood makes a renewable resource last longer. Using preserved wood makes sense.

Sound forest management ensures a continuing supply of wood for our building needs.

For utility poles, railroad ties, pilings, seawalls, docks, decks, landscaping, and other applications, pressure-treated wood represents the right direction.

Pressure-treated wood is safe. It's economical. It's good for the environment.

Critical construction schedules call for the total ECLIPSE Reflective Glass solution.

ECLIPSE Reflective Glass*

Time is money. And in today's world of tight budgets and fast-track scheduling, that's never been more true.

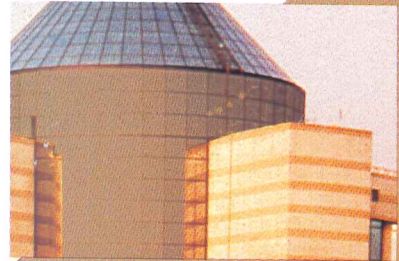

That's why more of today's architectural projects call for ECLIPSE® Reflective Glass.

Unlike soft-coat reflective glasses, ECLIPSE Reflective Glass is pyrolytically coated using LOF's patented on-line CVD process. Which means ECLIPSE Glass is durable and easily fabricated – it can be handled, cut, bent, insulated, laminated, heat-strengthened and tempered using standard float glass techniques.

In fact, compared to soft-coat products, ECLIPSE Reflective Glass can cut days or weeks off your schedule by significantly reducing lead times and improving production flexibility.

And ECLIPSE Reflective Glass is available in a distinctive palette of colors, including Blue-Green, Bronze, Grey, Clear and now the unique aesthetics of Gold.

So go ahead and make your schedule tight . . . because you can depend on ECLIPSE Reflective Glass to meet it.
